

Are We Suffering From Delusional Fear?

By Elaine Little, Eagle Forum of Alabama Vice President

I recently made a quick stop at a grocery store to get a single item I had missed previously. In my haste, I left my mask in the car. When I realized I was the only person there without my face covered, I was fearful. I quickly made my purchase and left the store. I was not fearful of the Covid virus. I was fearful of being “mask shamed” by others in the store. While this did not happen in this situation, I have read of such happening all over the nation, people ranting at or even assaulting others who were not masked. As Dr. David Williams told us in our last Eagle Forum newsletter, requiring masks makes little sense.

The bulk of published science shows that masks do not prevent the spread of viral infections. Yet, because the CDC and Dr. Fauci of the NIH says we should, we go along with this like sheep. Our political leaders at the state and local level tell us to wear them and to stay at least 6 feet away from other people. We continuously hear the Public Service Announcements on the air from the CDC to do our part to protect others.

We need to think about why we are so willing to go along with such edicts. We need to question why some people go into a state of panic at the sight of someone without a mask, even if they look perfectly healthy and show no signs of any type of respiratory illness.

In an article published on Lew Rockwell.com on February 19, 2021, Dr. Joseph Mercola points out that a growing number of mental health experts have expressed concern over the blatant fear and panic many are experiencing during the COVID-19 situation. Mercola reports that Dr. Mark McDonald, a psychiatrist who treats children, teens and their parents in Los Angeles, has written a number of articles and lectures discussing the fact that the real problem at hand is not the virus, but the “delusional fear of getting the virus.” We all have heard the fact that people who are otherwise healthy have a 99.7% chance of surviving an infection of the Covid virus and that children especially are not normally affected by the virus.

Of course, those who are most vulnerable, those with other medical issues and the infirm elderly must be protected, but the fear in much of the rest of our population is delusional in Dr. McDonald’s opinion, as well as many other medical experts.

In an article published in Evie Magazine, Dr. McDonald is quoted as saying, “the true public health crisis lies in the widespread fear which morphed and evolved into a form of mass delusional psychosis.”

Even though children are the least group affected by the virus, authorities still tell us in most areas of the country that children as young as 2 years old must wear masks in public, and businesses have instituted policies that impose stringent rules on customers. Parents have been removed from airplanes because their child would not keep the mask on the face. Stores have their signs that faces must be covered in order to enter.

The reasons our government continues to push for lockdowns, stay at home orders and mask mandates for months after it has become evident that they are not effective is beyond the scope of this article. But, the main issue is why the vast majority of Americans are blindly going along with the orders and meekly giving up our civil liberties. This, in spite of the fact that we are learning of the detrimental effects such orders have on our mental and emotional lives. While we in Alabama are not still subject to the strict restrictions of California, New York, and many other states, we are not immune from the mask mandates and in some areas the use of digital learning that keep our children from school and association with others.

McDonald is particularly concerned about the lasting effects this widespread psychosis will have on children as they grow up. As a psychiatrist who specializes in treating children and teens, he has seen a massive increase in patients and their mental states are far worse than what he is used to.

He said, "It is not normal for children to grow up thinking that everyone is a danger to everyone else." He said that many hysterical adults are mindlessly inflicting emotional trauma on the children and that one of the worst traumas children suffer is that they may kill their parents or grandparents simply by being around them.

We need face to face contact with others as well as physical contact. Without this we feel a sense of disconnection. We need this to feel safe around other people. I have felt this disconnect in dealing with others in public situations. I'm sure you have also. People in stores and other public places go on their way making no face to face contact. We see no smiles, hear very few words of casual conversation, and even at times fail to immediately recognize friends who are masked. We have Zoom meetings and streamed church services, but they are a poor substitution for personal face to face interactions and can never provide the emotional support we need on a day to day basis. This has proven to be the prime cause of depression in people during this trying time, especially among children.

In a short lecture on a video produced by America's Frontline Doctors White Coat Summit 2 in October, 2020, McDonald pointed to the delusional belief that masks, gloves and physical separation is required to stay alive; but that "fear has in many cases been turned into a virtue. If you do these things, you are a 'good person,' one who obviously cares about others. Whereas not wearing a mask brands you as an inconsiderate lout, if not a prospective mass murderer, simply by breathing."

McDonald said in the video, "We started out with fear and hysteria. We moved to delusional psychosis, and now we have group control. Now we don't have police officers and government coming after us. What we have more of is our fellow citizens now castigating us, legally limiting us from getting into vehicles (such as Uber or planes), going into businesses and getting jobs." Essentially we have citizens acting as de facto police to suppress other people's freedom.

We must reject the fear and study the situation ourselves. We must do all we can to improve our immune systems to protect us from this virus and others. We must make our decisions based upon our knowledge and experience, not let fearmongering control our lives and our reactions to the events that surround us. We must encourage others to do the same.

What are your chances?

Chances of getting Covid 19 here in Alabama are very dependent on your personal health situation, but overall most have a very low chance of contracting the virus. Each of us either has had Covid 19 or knows of those who have had it, some serious and many who have had very mild cases. This is not to discount the effect this virus has had on all of us. But the statistics show a very low impact relative to other illnesses.

Information from the Alabama Department of Public Health website as of Feb. 23, 2021, and the latest information on the population of Alabama as of the end of 2020 show the following:

Total population, 5,111,728. Total Covid 19 cases, confirmed and probable, as of Feb. 23, 2021, was 488,973. This means that we have only a 9.5% chance of getting the virus.

There have been a total of 9,660 deaths in Alabama including confirmed and probable cases. This means that we have only a 1.9% chance of death from Covid 19. While each of these deaths are tragic, we must keep the danger in perspective.

If you do contract the virus, there are now a number of very good medications such as Ivermectin and Hydroxychloroquine.

On December 30, 2020, the Trump administration scored a victory against the regime in Beijing through its “Clean Network” campaign that booted Huawei Technologies Co. out of critical telecommunications infrastructure in many countries. They secured an array of commitments from governments to exclude untrusted vendors from their fifth-generation (5G) wireless networks. As of this month, more than 50 nations, representing over two-thirds of the world’s economy, and 180 telecom companies had joined the “Clean Network” initiative led by the U.S. government in accordance with the National Defense Authorization Act. This is to make U. S. critical data and networks safe from the Chinese Communists Party (CCP).

Missouri has become the nation’s first “abortion free state”. Its last remaining abortion facility allegedly stopped performing abortions. Operation Rescue President Troy Newman attributed the closure of the last abortion facility to the strong enforcement of Missouri’s stringent pro-life laws. It appears that Planned Parenthood St Louis facility is only referring individuals to its Fairview Heights, Illinois facility just 13 miles away.

At one hospital in England, Awoke culture has invaded the maternity wards. Midwives at Brighton and Sussex University Hospitals have been told to say “chestfeeding” rather than “breastfeeding”. “Breastmilk” is now “chestmilk” or “milk from the feeding parent.” Other nonsense includes calling mothers the “birthing parent.”
The Times, UK, 2/11/2021

During May of 2020, the Supreme Court ruled that doctors could not provide the abortion pill via mail without seeing the patients first in person. This case was an attempt to use the pandemic as an excuse to bypass existing regulations. The conservatives on the court voted to reinstate the regulation. Chief Justice John Roberts was the only one of the supposed conservative majority to defer the case to the “health experts.” This shows the importance of President Trump’s 3 appointments to the court. His lasting legacy should continue to uphold conservative values. It should be the case for years to come unless the Biden administration and the Democrats in Congress are successful in “packing the Supreme Court.”

In an article posted on his website, Bill Gates and Neo-Feudalism: A Closer Look at Farmer Bill • Children’s Health Defense, Children’s Health Defense founder Robert R. Kennedy, Jr. reported that during the lockdowns and restrictions of the Covid pandemic, Bill Gates has increased his wealth by another $20 billion. He has used much of that money to expand his power over global populations by buying devalued assets and gaining monopoly control over many areas. According to the latest issue of The Land Report, Gates has now become the largest owner of farmland in the United States. He now owns about 242,000 acres of American farmland and nearly 27,000 acres of other lands across Louisiana, Arkansas, Nebraska, Arizona, Florida, Washington and 18 other states. According to Kennedy, Gates seems obsessed with monopoly control and domination of the food production in the U. S.

COVID—Pandemic or Politics

By Elaine Little, Vice President Eagle Forum of Alabama

We have all experienced the COVID situation since March 2020 when lockdowns and masks started to be mandated. We all know the virus is real, but to what extent are the draconian control mandates justified. With the number of cases increasing over the months and the number of deaths attributed to COVID now exceeding 500,000, we have followed the guidelines with little or no backlash.

Now we see the case numbers and deaths going down around the country as well as here in Alabama and we rejoice in that fact. But, what is the truth behind the numbers in the first place? As soon as the change in presidential administrations happened, we started seeing this reduction. Even before the inauguration, on January 16, Governor Cuomo in New York said they would not wait for herd immunity, whether naturally or from a vaccine, to start reopening his state. Others are starting to follow suit, although the mask mandates continue. They have realized that the lockdowns are not sustainable politically. So what happened to help them justify their changes?

An article published by The Independent Institute on Feb. 6, 2021, written by Angelo M. Codevilla describes the changes that enabled this relaxing of some restrictions, although certainly not extensive enough. The article provides the following insights.

There was a change in the definitions of the term “case” that made it possible to substitute the oligarchy’s agenda for COVID’s reality in the minds of Americans. On Inauguration Day, the World Health Organization, after consultation with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control, issued a two-part directive intended to reduce the number of what it calls “false positive” COVID cases that clarifies only the corrupt political nature of everything surrounding the pandemic.

Throughout 2020, doctors and hospitals had been encouraged—if not pressured—to label as COVID any set of symptoms that looked remotely like it (explaining why cases of influenza almost disappeared from the United States last year). Now the WHO asked them to make sure that in order for a case to be labeled COVID, symptoms must also match positive results of the standard PCR test.

Simultaneously, the WHO strongly suggested that those who administer the PCR test reduce the number of cycles through which samples are processed. Through 2020, most jurisdictions in America had run samples through 40 cycles. Running that many cycles radically increases the chances of a positive result. This not only inflated the number of “cases,” but it also attributed hospitalizations to COVID-19 rather than to other causes. It led to patients being treated as if they had COVID rather than for what really ailed them, and attributing deaths to COVID that in fact were not.

The new guidance guarantees that, in the coming months, the number of “cases” will drop. The oligarchy will credit the reduction to its wise management. Loosening its grip gradually, it will claim benevolence and prudence. By thus dismounting the COVID tiger, it will try to validate the harm it did over the previous year.

There being nothing especially artful about this stratagem, and most Americans not being utterly stupid, its success depends exclusively on the media’s near-unanimous complicity in it. That unanimity, however, may be getting harder to maintain. Not only is the binding objective—getting rid of Trump—no longer there, but also, documents are surfacing that show the material complicity between Anthony Fauci, the oligarchy’s fountain of authority in all matters COVID-19, and the development of the virus itself.

As we move beyond this situation, hopefully, we will learn more about the origin, not only of the virus, but also of the forces behind the way it has been handled.

What's Good About America Checks and Balances in our Constitution

By Rev. John Killian, Special Contributor to Eagle Forum

For generations, school students were taught that our Constitution kept us a free country with safeguards. In his Kentucky Resolve, Founding Father Thomas Jefferson warned against big government with the remedy “In questions of power, let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the constitution.” Our first President George Washington is credited with the warning “Government is not reason; it is not eloquence; it is force. Like fire, it is a dangerous servant and a fearful master.”

One of our key safeguards to protect us from an attack on liberty is our system of checks and balances. What is meant by the term “checks and balances?” Britannica defines “checks and balances” as “principle of government under which separate branches are empowered to prevent actions by other branches and are induced to share power.”

Checks and balances in government are several. The legislative branch may pass laws, but those laws must pass Constitutional muster, as directed by the famous Madison vs. Marbury case. The Judicial branch has authority to evaluate legislative actions by the Constitution, but then the legislative branch may vote to instruct the judicial branch in cases of overreach. Senator Jesse Helms sought to have Congress instruct the Judicial branch on the misguided Roe vs. Wade ruling.

Laws passed by Congress may be vetoed by the President and cannot be overridden without a 2/3 vote in both houses of Congress. A Constitutional Amendment requires 2/3 of each House of Congress plus ratification by 3/4 of the states. Such a high threshold for change is a safeguard from whims of change that fundamentally shake our constitutional underpinnings.

An ultimate check and balance is the power and rights of the states. The Tenth Amendment to the Constitution respects the rights of the states. The principle of Nullification is being discussed again in our land, as the ultimate safeguard against federal tyranny.

But why is big government not trustworthy? Why did our Founders work to guarantee that no force at the federal level would have absolute authority?

Consider that Thomas Jefferson was the intellectual heavyweight behind the American Revolution as Jefferson was the primary author of the Declaration of Independence. James Madison's Virginia Plan was the model for our US Constitution. Yet, when Federal authority became too weighty, as evidenced by the Aliens and Sedition Act, Jefferson and Madison joined forces as Jefferson was the primary author of the Kentucky Resolves and Madison the Virginia Resolve, documents that asserted the rights of the states to interpose between a tyrannical federal government and the liberty of the individual. Jefferson and Madison understood that the rights of the individual are best protected when the rights of the state are secure.

But what forged convictions of Jefferson and Madison on small government and individual liberty, as embodied by their advocacy of checks and balances? At the age of nine, Jefferson began attending a school operated by a Scottish Presbyterian minister in Albermarle County. While there, Jefferson studied Latin, Greek, the classics, learned to ride horses and became a student of nature. In 1758 through 1760, Jefferson studied under Reverend James Maury at a boarding school in Gordonsville. Maury was active in the debates which led to the American Revolution.

While Jefferson may not have followed Maury's theology in its entirety, Jefferson did learn and believed in the innate sinfulness of humanity. Jefferson understood that humanity was bent toward evil and could not be trusted with too much power over another.

Madison had been trained and mentored by Donald Robertson, a Scottish Presbyterian minister who trained young Madison in a boarding school. James Smylie reports that Madison, “learned the Bible with a Calvinist twist.” Madison said, of Donald Robertson, “All I have been in life, I owe largely to that man.”

Finishing with Donald Robertson, Madison went on to train at now-Princeton University under the Scottish Presbyterian John Witherspoon. Of the fifty-five delegates to the 1787 Constitutional Convention, nine were Princeton graduates, six had trained extensively under John Witherspoon. Again, the doctrine of man's depravity led toward the principle that too much government could not be stored in any one faction of government, lest the whole system be corrupted, and the rights of some individuals trampled.

We live in a blessed land, protected by our Constitution, framed by individuals who saw a need for checks and balances. The influence of biblical thinking is evident in the protection of our rights.

MILITARY EYEING EMP RECOVERY JETS

Since we have recently written about the dangers of an Electromagnetic Pulse event, we are pleased to report that there may be help on the way to providing a means to rapidly recover from such an event.

An interesting excerpt from Bill Gertz's Inside the Ring, The Washington Times, dated 17 February 2021, reported about a group of former arms designers who built secret weapons at Lockheed Martin's famed Skunk Works and for other contractors have built a small portable jet that could help the nation recover from an electromagnetic pulse event, such as a solar storm or nuclear blast that knocks out all electronics over thousands of miles.

Transcendent Aerospace designed the stealthy SJ-1 and S-2 single- and twin-engine aircraft for general aviation, but recently shifted to military production.

The jets can be armed with a 30-millimeter cannon for close air support and are so quiet that they create hardly any sound at 1,000 feet, making them ideal weapons systems for America's covert warriors, according to company officials.

The jet was designed by Robert Bornhofen, a former Skunk Works engineer, and was developed with the help of retired Air Force Col. James Stewart, a veteran test pilot.

"With these production-ready disruptive designs, we have created essentially the 'Jeep' of jets that provide for the first time since WWII, aircraft that are designed for the mission and not missions designed to fit existing aircraft," the company said in a statement to Inside the Ring.

For reconstituting U.S. communications after an EMP event or cyberattack, the aircraft can be outfitted with communications gear that will reconnect vital satellite and electronic communications through the small aircraft flying in shifts.

The jets are EMP-hardened to withstand the effects of a nuclear blast or special EMP weapons.

The aircraft can also provide continuous coverage for satellite, cellphone and ground "backhaul" communications within a few hours after an event.

The company hopes the Pentagon, which can more easily reconstitute military communications, will use the aircraft to restore communications with civilian agencies and the private sector shortly after an electronic blackout.

The company estimates that the entire United States could be covered with the aircraft's telecommunications equipment for around $1 billion. Each jet can provide communications for 5,500 square miles.

"It is not 'if' but 'when' will there will be a cyber or EMP attack on U.S. soil," say Mr. Bornhofen and Col. Stewart. "It is in the war doctrine of all our potential enemies."

The unique jets can be stored and transported inside 40-foot shipping containers and rapidly set up by three people within four hours. The craft can take off within nine seconds and can land on short runways, beaches and grass airstrips.

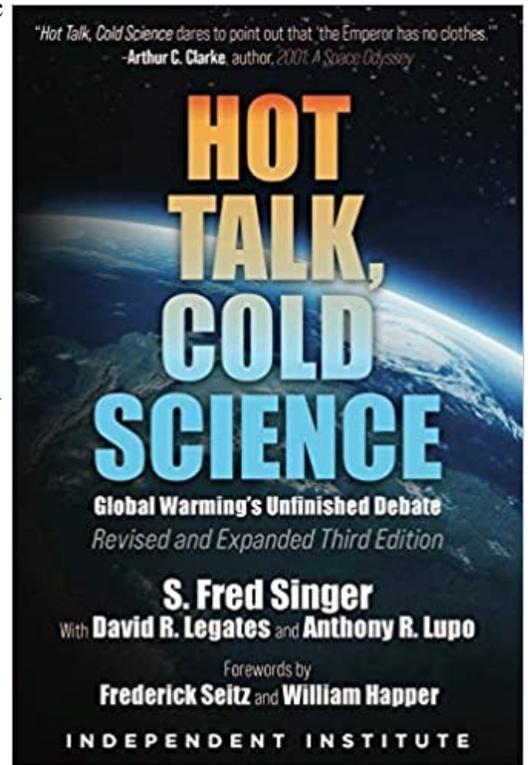

The price is relatively inexpensive with stripped-down models costing around $3.5 million and armed models for around $9 million a piece. In addition to counter-electronic warfare missions, the jets can be used for counter-drone missions, electronic spying, covert operations and training. Hopefully, our government will pursue the deployment of such planes.

Environmental Truths

Calvin Beisner of the Cornwall Alliance recently wrote about a book by S. Fred Singer. In this book, the third edition of his extraordinary book Hot Talk, Cold Science, Singer plays attorney for the defense. He figuratively cross-examines the witnesses. In the process, he uncovers their lies, half-truths, and suppressed truths. The result should be a verdict of “Not guilty!”

Here are seven truths the prosecution doesn’t want the jury—the public and policymakers—to know. Contrary to the prosecutions’ claims:

1. “Severe storms and hurricanes . . . , as well as precipitation, appear to have diminished in the past fifty years.”
2. “Global agriculture has benefited already from increased CO2 and will continue to benefit from possible climate warming and increased precipitation . . . .”
3. “The spread of disease vectors, like malaria-carrying mosquitoes, will be unimportant in comparison to the growth in human vectors” (that is, in the numbers and mobility of people who can spread disease over wide distances).
4. “Historical evidence supports the idea that warmer climate intervals are beneficial for human activities, food production, and health.”
5. “Mitigation techniques are available that can slow down the rise of atmospheric [greenhouse gases] and possible climate change” including energy conservation and efficiency, hydro and nuclear power; and more.
6. “Tree planting and ocean fertilization may be low-cost methods of sequestering atmospheric CO2” if that turns out to be desirable.
7. “Attempting to mitigate climate change by imposing mandatory controls on energy use can create economic losses, harming especially poor people and poor nations, that exceed the possible benefits by orders of magnitude. . . . Adaptation . . . is generally superior to both mitigation and sequestration.”

By reading Hot Talk, Cold Science, we can learn to explain and defend these truths in conversation with others. Available presently from Amazon, unless they ban it, and other book sellers.

Disney added all five seasons of The Muppet Show to its streaming service, Disney + on Feb. 19. Before select episodes, Disney has inserted a brief disclaimer warning viewers of that content: “This program includes negative depictions and /or mistreatment of people and cultures. One such episode shows Johnny Cash performing a song in front of a Confederate flag. They are bowing down to the “woke” cancel culture, but not enough to miss the profits they will get by showing the series.
